

North Cliffs Access Improvement Project

NORTH CORNWALL

The section of the South West Coast Path between Basset's Cove and the North Cliffs, 1 mile north of Camborne, provides excellent opportunities for access for all given its largely level topography, close car parking and excellent views of the north Cornish coast. The National Trust has already improved an 800m section of the coast path to make it suitable for wheelchair access.

The project involved the installation of five stock-proof easy access gates at the entrances to the field, rearranging farm access gates, groundworks to ensure safe access from the public highway and levelling of other sections of path.

This project has improved access to the coast path from the nearby network of paths at Tehidy Country Park (managed by Cornwall Council), making it suitable for all-terrain mobility buggies, and providing a greater range of routes for people with disabilities.

This project has suffered delays due to obtaining agreement over suitable gate and catch designs with local mobility buggy users, and also with the heavy winter rainfall which delayed work on site.

Before

After

